In order to use the new Si ku quan shu （四庫全書） database, users need to download a client program into their own personal computer (Please note: the client software has only Windows version. It works on Apple computers running Windows Parallels programs). All the workstations in the East Asian Library have the client installed already.

URL for Client program download - http://www.eastview.com/Online/SikuDownload
From the URL above, users are able to download the client program software (setup.exe), the Installation Guide and the database User Manual. The Installation Guide available at http://www.eastview.com/Online/SikuDownload. It contains very important information regarding the technical requirements for user's PCs, especially required language packages.

Please note that this client program is necessary to access the database, and there is no direct access URL that can be referenced. Using a different web browser, such as Internet Explorer or Firefox, is not available.