The Cheng Yu Tung East Asian Library organized two events to celebrate the Asian Heritage Month in May 2007.

1. An Exhibition of Selected Library Resources on East Asian Cultural Heritage and History in Canada

Asian Canadians have made significant contributions to Canada in various aspects. To highlight the long and rich history of Asians in Canada, the staff at the Cheng Yu Tung East Asian Library has prepared an exhibition depicting past and present achievements of East Asian Canadians. These brief introductions include the history and major events related to East Asians in Canada, a review of Chinese workers’ contribution to the Canadian railroads, a close look at China-towns and Korea-towns in Greater Toronto Area and a survey of Chinese and Japanese Canadian literature. With this exhibition, we hope to bring to our audiences educational information about East Asian Canadians and in particular the community in Toronto, and raise awareness of the library’s resources to our users. For more information about the library’s resources on this topic, please consult with our subject specialists or visit the Virtual Exhibitions section of our web site at http://www.library.utoronto.ca/east.

2. Opening Reception of the Exhibition and Presentations on Asian Diaspora Experiences

Co-sponsored by the East Asian Library and the Canadian Foundation for Asian Culture, the opening reception was held at the Current Resources Centre on May 16. It was attended by more than thirty prominent guests from Toronto’s East Asian communities. These guests represented a wide range of community contacts that the library values and with whom the library maintains its gift and exchange program, and community outreach activities. They included cultural consuls, community leaders, writers and artists, social workers and information professionals.

Three community speakers gave presentations and shared their Asian Diaspora experiences. Doug Hum, the director of the Foundation to Commemorate the Chinese Railroad Workers in Canada, and whose father came to Canada from China in 1912 and paid a head tax of $500, told his family’s immigration story, the contribution of Chinese railroad workers and related the efforts that he made in persuading the Canadian government to recognize these contributions. Minoru Yatabe, a Canadian military veteran of Japanese background, was born in 1922 in Canada. He was a graduate of the Department of Chemical Engineering at the University of Toronto. He talked about his experiences during the Second World War. Along with many other “boys” from Japanese heritage, he had served in the Canadian Army as a Japanese-language interpreter-translator during the war. Our Korean speaker Sung-nak Bak spoke of his immigration experience when he came to Canada almost four decades ago. His experience was similar to many new immigrants’ stories of career struggles. Now retired from his librarian profession, Sung-nak is devoting most of his time to serve the Korean community and lead various organizations.
A video recording of these speeches has been added to the library holding. The library will also make the clips of these talks available on its homepage. For more information about these activities and resources, please contact Jack Leong at jack.leong@utoronto or 416-978-1025.

Notable Acquisitions

English Reference Titles

The reference collection in the East Asian Library includes English materials. Our librarians regularly select important English reference titles to support teaching and research in East Asian Studies. Many of these titles are unique in the University of Toronto Libraries system. The following are some recent acquisitions in the collection.

Using the extensive documentation of the order found in Lisbon and Rome, this book presents the history of Jesuit priests and brothers who preached in China and of local Chinese who became Christians. This documentary includes the Jesuit priests’ journey to the imperial court in Peking, the dusty villages of Shanxi Province, the bustling cities of the Yangzi delta region, and the mountain hamlets of Fujian. It is an important reference title for the studies of political, cultural, scientific, linguistic, and religious engagement between East and West from 1579 until the proscription of Christianity in 1724.

The Rise of the Chinese Empire DS741.5 C37

Volume 1: Nation, State, and Imperialism in Early China, ca. 1600 B.C. – A.D. 8

Volume 2: Frontier, Immigration, and Empire in Han China, 130 B.C. – A.D. 157

In the 20th century, there were about sixty thousand Han-period documents discovered in Central Asia and western China preserved on strips of wood and bamboo. Using these newfound documents, Professor Chang Chun-shu analyzes the ways in which political, institutional, social, economic, military, religious, and philosophical thought systems developed and changed from the ancient period to the Han empire (ca. 1600 B.C. – A.D. 220) in the first volume. In the second volume, Chang continues the analysis by reconstructing the history of the colonization undertaken by the Chinese empire. This publication provides critical information in the second and first centuries B.C., a crucial period in Chinese history which saw the birth and development of the concepts of state, nation, nationalism, imperialism, ethnicity, and “Chineseness” in ancient and early Imperial China.

Encyclopedia of Buddhism BQ128 E53 2007

With 340 alphabetically arranged entries, this title covers the entire Buddhist tradition in detail. In addition, you will also find arrangement by major topics to guide you through the work thematically. These include (1) Buddhist history (in Asian cultures); (2) Major Buddhist traditions and schools; (3) Significant persons; (4) Canons, texts, and other literature; (5) Concepts and ideas; (6) Rituals and customs; (7) Sacred places; (8) the Buddhist diaspora

Modern Chinese Literary Thought: Writings on Literature, 1893-1945 PL 2302 M63 1996X

This volume contains 57 essays from the beginning period of literary modernity in China. It has collected works of Liang Qichao, Lu Xun, Mao Dun, Zhang Ailing and Shen Congwen. They present a broad range of literary writings reflecting the mainstream Marxist interpretation of the literary values of modern China and the marginalized views proscribed by the leftist canon. This title has rich information about the cultural contexts influencing the production of literary texts during this period.

A Biographical Dictionary of Later Han to the Three Kingdoms (23-220 AD) DS748.15 D4 2007

This dictionary provides information on Chinese of Late (or Eastern) Han; from Liu Xiu 劉秀, the founding Emperor Guangwu 光武, to the celebrated warlord Cao Cao 曹操 (155-220) at the end of the dynasty. The entries include surnames, personal names and dates. With maps, genealogical tables and indexes, lists of books and special accounts of women, this work is an indispensable reference tool for studies and research on the period from Late Han to the Three Kingdoms.
Chinese Collection

Zhongguo zhu ming cang shu jia shu mu hui kan
中國著名藏書家書目匯刊  Z987.5.C6 Z525 2005

This title represents a milestone in providing bibliographic and indexing tools for private libraries in China. These libraries often contain very important historical collections, especially in the Ming (1368-1644) and Qing (1644-1911) periods. This multi-volume set includes bibliographic information on over 160 major book collections of the Ming, Qing and the Republic periods, thus providing an opportunity for users to browse the treasures of China’s private libraries.

Qing dai xue shu bi ji cong kan
清代學術筆記叢刊  AZ791 .Q564 2005

This collection, in 70 volumes, includes 240 titles of scholarly notes by Qing academics. Research on Chinese classics reached its golden era in Qing Dynasty. In this publication, you can find tremendous amount of in-depth textual analysis, annotations and criticism on classical texts by Qing scholars.

Li dai “Shan hai jing” wen xian ji cheng
歷代山海經文獻集成
DS707 .S43 L523 2006

Shan hai jing is a unique and the most important classical record of Chinese knowledge on astronomy, geology, geography, mythology, religion, ethnography and folklore from the legendary period to early dynasties. The study of Shan hai jing, flourished from the Han Dynasty (202 B.C.-A.D.220) and continued through the Song (960-1279) to the Qing (1644-1911) dynasties. This 11-volume title has included over 10 influential annotated works on the study of Shan hai jing, and there are also some rare materials.

Li dai pan li pan du
歷代判例判牘
KNN77 .L523 2005

This title, in 12 volumes, contains the research work on the legal history of China conducted by the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences from 2000 to 2005. It has collected 53 classical texts that discuss criminal and civic cases as well as the studies of these cases from pre-Qin to Ming dynasties. Many of the texts have been taken from rare books and royal archives. This collection will be useful for scholars who study ancient China’s legal system and history.

Japanese Collection

The East Asian Library is pleased to announce the recent addition of メリーランド 大学図書館所蔵 ゴードンW. プランゲ 文庫教育図書目録：占領期検閲教育関係図書 1945-1949 (Merīrandō Daigaku Toshokan shozō Gōdon W. Purange Bunko kyōiku tosho mokuroku : senryōki ken'etsu kyōiku kankei tosho 1945-1949) to the Japanese collection. This catalogue comprises over 10,000 titles of the Occupation-period censored education books written by individuals and co-authors on a variety of topics. This subset of the Gordon W. Prange collection illustrates what educators thought, what teachers taught and what students learned and studied in Japan during the years following World War II.

The Gordon W. Prange Collection is the most comprehensive collection of books published in Japan during the Occupation Period, 1945-1949. The materials in the collection were all reviewed by the Civil Censorship Detachment (CCD), an agency established by the Supreme Command of the Allied Powers (SCAP) to identify any violations of the Code for the Japanese Press. Professor Prange was originally sent to Japan as a member of the American Occupation Forces and continued living in Japan from 1946 to 1951 as a civilian. The censorship of the Japanese media was lifted in 1949. Professor Prange recognized the historical significance of the CCD materials and arranged for them to be shipped to the University of Maryland. Professor Prange continued to teach at the University of Maryland until months before his death on May 15, 1980.

The Prange Collection is searchable via the University of Maryland Libraries Catalog. With the advanced search feature, it is possible to limit the location to “Prange Collection” in order to find monographs in the collection. As for magazines, there is the 占領期雑誌記事情報データベース (Senryoki Zasshi Kiji Joho Databesu; Occupation Period Magazine Database) <http://prangedb.kicx.jp/>.
Korean Collection

Choson Chongdokpu Kwanbo 朝鮮總督府官報
By Choson Chongdokpu.
KPA7 .K67

This collection of 142 volumes covers the governor’s reports from August 29, 1910 to August 15, 1945. The collection has tremendous value for research on Korea during the Japanese imperialistic rule. It provides rich data on the independence movement, the colonial policies, and the lives of the people in those days. East Asian Library has purchased 10 volumes, and it will purchase the remaining volumes continuously.

Hanguk chimyong chongnam 韓國地名總覽
By Hangul Hakhoe. DS901.8 .H3 (Reference title)

This 20 volume set lists all the names of Korean villages, streams and mountains. The title was published from 1964 to 1986, spanning over 22 years. The author collected all the geographical names in South Korea. He has consulted about 120 books, including Dongguk Yoji Sungnam, and obtained primary sources from seniors living in villages. Different forms of a name are included, such as Korean, Chinese character and modified names.

Choson ohak chonso 조선 어학 전서
This title has 63 volumes, and was published by Pukhan Sahoe Kwahagwon Onohak Yonguso. It puts together academic studies on North Korea’s language for the past 60 years systematically. Volumes 1-3 are about the enactment of North Korea’s standard language and policies; 4-13 describe the history of language from ancient to modern times and 14-38 are about lexis, semantics, grammars and dialectology. Volumes 39-45 deal with Chosono information research; 46-47 with the history of changes of Chosono norms and 48-63 discuss problems in writing and speaking.

Internet Resources Highlight

Do you know? The Internet Resources Subject Guide developed by the East Asian Library provides links to many wonderful online resources on East Asian Studies. All these resources allow free access to high quality content. This online subject guide is annotated and organized by the library staff. It is keyword searchable and is available at [http://link.library.utoronto.ca/eal/web/internet_resources/]

If our subject guide does not have the link that you need, go to the General Links section for search engines and online resources portals. The following are some examples of Web resources portal on Asia and China Studies:

This website is maintained by the Sinological Institute, Leiden University, Netherlands. It offers a great selection of annotated online resources on various China-related studies. These resources are arranged according to the Library of Congress Classification Schedules.

Good News!

New Computers in EAL

The public computers in the library have been upgraded by the Information Commons. With more advanced hardware and software applications, now you can work more efficiently using these workstations in the library. The library is grateful to the Information Commons team for upgrading the computers so efficiently.

EAL Bookmark

Need quick advice in finding EAL books? Want to see our loan policy at a glance? Please come and get the bookmark prepared by our access and circulation staff. This bookmark, small in size and brief in content, helps you to find EAL books in three steps. It provides you with important information about our loan policy, loan periods for different categories of users and different types of material. These bookmarks are available at the circulation counter and the reference desk.

Donated Collections Research Guide Series: Chinese Women’s Studies

Three scholarly collections have been put together in the Tibetan Room of the Cheng Yu Tung East Asian Library. These are the Bobby Siu Collection on Chinese literature, art, philosophy and religion, Paul Levine Collection on China studies and J. Kwang Collection on China’s education, politics and sociology from 1960s to 1980s. The titles of these collections are listed in the “Holdings Lists” of the “China Studies Resources” section in our library’s website [http://link.library.utoronto.ca/eal/web/resources/chinese/uncatalogued.htm]. To gain access to these titles, please take note of the call numbers and inquire at the circulation desk.

The research guide on Chinese Women’s Studies provides scholars with information on this topic. It highlights titles of Biographies, Feminism, Women in Literature, Social Conditions, and Socialism and History. This guide is available online [http://link.library.utoronto.ca/eal/web/services/fads/graylitesguide.pdf] and at the reference desk.
In the spring semester of 2007, our East Asian Information Services Librarian, Jack Leong, delivered special in-class library instruction seminars designed specifically for three undergraduate courses and two graduate courses. In each seminar, Jack highlighted the library print and electronic resources that were of interest to students taking the course. He demonstrated the effective use of online library catalogues and other tools to facilitate the searching for library materials. He also discussed strategies for information assessment, which would facilitate students in locating quality and helpful electronic resources. Students responded very positively to the seminars. They learned essential concepts, including keyword and subject heading searches, LC classification system and Boolean operators. After attending the seminar, they felt more confident in utilizing the library and the library catalogue system.

In the evaluation forms completed anonymously, 21 participants expressed their gratitude in the comment section by writing phrases such as “thank you” and “wonderful presentation”. One user expressed high appreciation: “[The seminar] was perfect. I learned everything that I want[ed] to learn.”

The following chart summarizes the averages of 65 responses collected for the seminar. It shows that participants rated the overall quality and usefulness of the seminar as excellent or very good. They also considered the information presented to be very useful and relevant.

EAL Audio Tapes Available in Digital Format

Media materials are very useful for learning languages and cultures. The library has recently converted more than 160 popular audio tapes to preserve them from damage. At the same time, users can now listen to these materials by using computer or CD player. These materials cover diverse subject matters, such as language learning, dialects, folk songs, traditional music, popular culture and story reading. The following titles are some examples.

Spoken Chinese 900

漢語口語900 句

With Hanyu Pinyin (Chinese phonetic) and English translations printed alongside, this title is helpful for students learning conversational Chinese.

Chun 春 mix PL2780 F4C67 1987

This sound recording is an abridged version of the volume 2 of Ba Jin's famous trilogy, Turbulent Currents – Family, Spring, Autumn. This is a story about the decline of a large feudal family following the May Fourth Movement of 1919.

Inadani no minwa to warabeuta

伊那谷の民話とわらべ歌
GR341 .N3 I48 1987

This is a title of folk tales and children songs in Japan with sound recordings, illustrations and textual scripts.

Han’guk minyo taej’onjip 漢國民謠大全籍

M 1816 .H36 1978

With one book and 14 cassettes, this title contains a comprehensive collection of traditional folk music and songs of Korea.

Please note that media materials are for use in the library only.
Korean Farming Reports Donated by Mr. Samuel Sukhong and Mrs. Yunice Kyungnam Min

Mr. Samuel Sukhong Min (闵硕泓) and Mrs. Yunice Kyungnam Min (Maiden name: Kyungnam Yun, 尹慶男) donated 282 Korean farming reports to the Cheng Yu Tung East Asian Library. Mr. and Mrs. Min inherited these materials from Min Kyŏng-hwi (閔庚煇, 1903-1978), the father of Mr. Min, who received these materials from his mother, Yu Chin-gyŏng (兪鎭卿, 1879-1973).

These documents were submitted by tenant farmers (小作農 sojangnong) to their landlords probably in the late Chosŏn dynasty (1890’s) and until liberation in 1945. However, in the Chosŏn dynasty, the tenant farmers were mostly illiterate so a Nonggam (farm overseer) wrote the reports on their behalf. These documents were probably presented to either Min Pyŏng-sŏk (閔丙奭, 1858-1940), the Home Secretary of the Palace during the Chosŏn period or Min Hyŏng-gi (閔亨基, 1880-1912), the royal secretary of the Bureau of Secretariat (秘書院 Pisŏwŏn).

Mr. Min is a member of the Sambangp’a (三房派) family, a branch of the Yŏhŭng Min-ssi (麗興閔氏) in the Min clan. Two other famous historical figures from this family also had significant influence on Korean history:

Queen Min (明成皇后 Myŏngsŏng Hwanghu, 1851-1895), wife of King Kojong (高宗, 1852-1919), the 26th King of the Chosŏn dynasty.

Min Yŏng-hwan (閔永煥, 1861-1905), a civil minister and a patriotic martyr in the late Chosŏn dynasty, protested against the Ŭlsa Treaty with Japan in 1905. When the treaty was arranged, he committed suicide, making known his devotion to the Korean nation.

This donation will provide the University of Toronto community invaluable historical resources on the farmer’s situation during the late Chosŏn dynasty.
The 2007 Association for Asian Studies (AAS) and Council of East Asian Library (CEAL) Annual Meetings

In March 2007, our librarians participated in the 2007 AAS and CEAL annual meetings held in Boston. These meetings provided opportunities for scholars, librarians and information providers to share their knowledge and experiences. Anna U, our library director and a committee member of the CEAL Chinese Materials Committee, participated in organizing an information session for major Chinese electronic resource vendors to present their new products and services. The meetings provided great opportunities for librarians to learn about the latest development in East Asian librarianship, to share information, to dialogue and build networks.

2007 UTL Staff Conference

Our library staff organized a panel entitled “Students Participation in Managing East Asian Studies Collection and Services” during the May 2007 University of Toronto Library Staff Conference. In this session, presenters discussed the FIS practicum projects and the work-study program designed to enrich students’ learning experiences. The session was chaired by Anna U. It began with Hana Kim’s presentation about the practicum project on digitizing the North Korean photograph collection. Stephen Qiao talked about his practicum student’s project involving the processing of Chinese Cultural Revolution archival materials, and Jack Leong gave a presentation on engaging students as users of the library’s services, including the library’s homepage and the library instruction seminar.
